The initial meeting in the interests of this movement was held as above stated and was attended by some of the leading business and professional men of the city.

An interesting address was made by Mr. Thomas M. Beadencoff, superintendent of the Public Baths, of Ballimore, Md. He reviewed the sanitary condition of European and American cities, showing the remarkable development during the past hundred years. The Ballimore baths, the gift of Mr. Henry Valiters, are probably the most modern in use and are patronized each year by thousands of bathers.

Lively Discussion.

The condition of Mr. W. E. Wingo, who was bruised in failing from a wagon that was struck by an electric car Monday, was reported as serious last night. The case against the conductor and motorman in charge of the car was continued in the Mayor's Court yesterday until Saturday, so Mr. Wingo may be present. at the Academy—Bijou.

Of the new play of Ezra Kendall, which will be seen at the Academy to-night, the Atlanta Journal's critic says:

"As dainty as the violets which came after the rush and the violets which has the roses depicted in the background, was Ezra Kendall, his company and his play, "Weather Beaten Benson." There is something so quaint and delicate about Mr. Kendall's humor that one cannot help be affected and touched and irresistibly carried along on the tide which he sets in motion. He belongs to the old school of dramatic thoroughbreds, wherein Joe Jefferson and Sol. Smith Russell held high sway, and where, as their brother pedagogues, Tim Murphy and Ezra Kendall, must be ranked. Mr. Kendall is an artist in every conception of the word.

"The company with the performer was an exceedingly pleasing one throughout. Little Miss Edith Taliaferro, in a juvenilo role proved to be an attraction in herself. Among those who deserve especial merition are Miss Johnson and Lucila Javergne, with the others, including Homer Granville, Harry Hanlon, Thurlow Bergen, Harold Russell and Miss Howard. This list completed a capable cast.

"The play is synopsized into three subdivisions: The rush, the rain and the roses. A fair house was present, but these who braved the watery gurgle without were more than repaid." Thomas Slokes, a negro, was arrested on Brook Avenue hast night about 7 o'clock by Polleceman Nuckols, who charged him with being a suspicious character.
